Welcome from the President

Dear Members and Friends of SRA:

Welcome to the SRA 2014 Biennial Meeting. We are excited to welcome you to Austin! We look forward to an outstanding conference program thanks to the leadership of the Program Co-Chairs Connie Flanagan (University of Wisconsin) and Daniel Hart (Rutgers University). Social justice is the theme for the invited program: Connie and Dan have worked for two years to bring together invited speakers and auxiliary activities that highlight the potential for social justice in research on adolescence.

Many additional thanks are in order, not all of which I can acknowledge here. But we have a number of external partners who have supported the priorities of our members in exciting ways. Thanks to the Jacobs Foundation for their support of the Innovative Small Grants program (we will announce the winners as part of the Thursday evening program); the International Young Scholars Program that for years has supported young scholars from around the world to come to SRA; and the global welcome reception for all attendees on Thursday evening. Thanks also to the William T. Grant Foundation for their support of the Young Scholars Program, which has brought under-represented U.S. college students to SRA. And finally, to Atlantic Philanthropies who has sponsored an invited program session to focus attention on the need for research and justice related to disparities in school discipline.

SRA is a member-based society and we continue to develop ways that we are relevant and engaging for members. Last year we launched a Youth Advisory Board that responds to and blogs for the SRA website. Our website also includes news, member blogs, resources for teaching and for emerging scholars, and information and announcements about SRA activities and opportunities. We continue our partnership with the European Association for Research on Adolescence in co-sponsoring the EARA/SRA international Summer School (also supported by the Jacobs Foundation!). Our biennial meeting and conference continues to grow, and our Journal for Research on Adolescence is stronger every year. And this year we collaborated with Society for Adolescent Health and Medicine in our conference planning: I hope many of you stay on in Austin for the SAHM conference!

And there are a few other exciting new announcements: Hear them at the Welcome and Awards Ceremony and Global Reception on Thursday at 5:30pm! Through these events we aim to foster a sense of community within your SRA. And there will be food and dynamic performances by youth!

I hope you enjoy our conference; attend the talks by your colleagues, students, former mentors, mentors, and friends; and actively participate in the receptions and networking opportunities available to you. See you soon!

Stephen T. Russell
SRA President
Welcome from the Program Co-Chairs

Dear Attendees,

We are delighted to welcome you to Austin Texas, for the 15th Biennial Meeting of the Society for Research on Adolescence!

The very best research and policy concerning adolescents will be presented, discussed, and debated over the course of the conference. Never before has the quality of the conference been as high; there was a record number of submissions (1773!) for this year’s meeting, and anyone interested in any facet of youth will find that relevant posters, papers, roundtable discussions, workshops, views by two, symposia, and invited talks fill each day from beginning to end. We encourage you to attend as many of these sessions as possible and to dialogue with and learn from fellow colleagues. This year’s meeting has two unique features.

The first of these is that the invited program has as its theme social justice. The scholarship of many SRA members has implications for social justice. In addition, the invited program includes many of the world’s leading authorities on the intersection of adolescence and social justice themes and we hope you will take full advantage of these sessions. We hope that SRA members will leave Austin with new insights into how our work can advance the welfare of adolescents around the world.

We have also coordinated this year’s meeting with the Society for Adolescent Health and Medicine (SAHM). Sessions on Saturday will focus on various aspects of adolescent health. The highlight of this coordination will be Saturday night’s joint session “What’s Hot (and What’s Not): The Future of Research and Practice with Adolescents” featuring brief presentations by the presidents and presidents-elect of each society serving to focus discussions among members of the two societies.

Great conferences—SRA 2014, Austin Texas will be on everyone’s list—have many sources. The most important ingredient for a good meeting is a thoughtful, knowledgeable group of participants. We are grateful to all of you who have traveled to Austin to contribute your expertise to this year’s meeting.

This year’s conference also benefits from the efforts of innumerable volunteers, including the chairs of the review panels, the reviewers for each panel, and the moderators of the various panels. Without the cheerful goodwill and insightful contributions of this small army of volunteers, no conference would be possible.

Finally, leadership matters: Stephen Russell, Susan Lennon, Anne Perdue and Casey Irelan have guided and implemented every decision that makes this conference a success. Many thanks!

Connie Flanagan and Daniel Hart

Finding funding as an early stage investigator can be a challenge. As an early career or newly independent investigator, you may not be aware of available funding opportunities, funding opportunities specifically for early career investigators, or how to apply for them. Perhaps you have heard conflicting information from different people, but you really want to know the bottom line. This interactive session will address common questions about applying for federal funding opportunities at the National Institutes of Health (NIH), dispel myths, identify opportunities for early career investigators, and explore strategies and tactics for obtaining NIH funding. Participants will have an opportunity for discussion with federal officials.

Emerging Scholar Representative: Carolyn Spellings, University of Tennessee

A Ph.D. offers opportunities that go beyond academia, but students have less frequent access to information about these careers, and those paths may not be illuminated in graduate training. To highlight some of the many possible careers after graduate school, this roundtable discussion features panelists who utilize their training in diverse ways and in unique settings. The panel includes new professionals as well as senior scholars who have careers in government funding bodies, private research institutions, and private foundations. Each panelist will describe their career course(s), discuss the benefits and challenges of their chosen field, and provide a road map for graduate students and early career professionals for exploring their career options and considering non-academic paths. This interactive session will draw on questions from the audience.
SATURDAY, MARCH 22

Emerging Scholar Representatives: Josafá Da Cunha, Universidade Estadual do Centro-Oeste and Carolyn Spellings, University of Tennessee

All students and new professionals are invited to join your Emerging Scholar Representatives for morning snacks and conversation. This event is designed both to be an open forum for discussion about the needs and experiences of emerging scholars in SRA. Emerging Scholar Committee members will share information about new initiatives and get feedback from attendees on key issues. Join us for the community meeting, and you’ll have a chance to win a free one-year SRA membership.

12:15 PM - 1:45 PM; Salon G, Floor 6
Event 3-041. The Ins and Outs of Publishing: A Conversation with the Editors
Panelists: Manfred H. M. van Dulmen, Kent State University; Jacquelynne Eccles, University of Michigan; Nancy Guerra, University of Delaware; Charles Irwin Jr., University of California, San Francisco; Todd Little, University of Kansas and Roger Levesque, Indiana University
Emerging Scholar Representatives: Josafá Da Cunha, Universidade Estadual do Centro-Oeste and Carolyn Spellings, University of Tennessee

We all know the importance of publishing, but the process is often daunting. During this workshop, emerging scholars will have a chance to dialogue with decision-makers in the publishing process. This is your opportunity to find answers to those lingering questions. Which journal should you choose? What are the editors looking for? How can I make my research stand out? What’s the best way to handle a rejection or address comments from reviewers? This session will provide candid insights into the submission, review, and publishing processes directly from the editors of six premier adolescent research journals: Journal of Research on Adolescence, the International Journal of Behavioral Development, the Journal of Adolescent Health, the Journal of Emerging Adulthood, Developmental Psychology, and the Journal of Youth and Adolescence. Each representative will describe the unique focus of their journal and provide some hands-on tips for publishing in that journal. This interactive session will rely on audience questions.

P-001. America's Military-Connected Children, Adolescents, and Families: Promoting Developmental Research and Evidence-Based Programs
Room 406
Wednesday, 8:00 am – 6:00 pm (Ticketed event)

The purpose of this pre-conference meeting is to present extant knowledge about the children and families of today’s United States military and to identify what we know (and do not know) about their strengths and the challenges they face, as well as the programs that serve them. The pre-conference speakers, drawn from the scholars contributing to The Future of Children volume, will then point to specific directions for future research, and discuss the evidence (or lack thereof) behind current and future policies and programs that serve these children and families. These presentations will highlight how research on nonmilitary children and families can help us understand their military-connected counterparts and, in turn, how research on military children can contribute both to a general understanding of human development and to our knowledge of other populations of at-risk American children. Participants in the pre-conference will meet in break-out groups with researchers and military personnel to generate ideas for new research-application links pertinent to military children and families. Participants will also interact with representatives of federal government offices and of private foundations that support research about and programs for military children and families. The goal of the pre-conference is to create a new cadre of developmental scientists studying or designing and evaluating programs and policies for military children and families, to catalyze new collaborations among developmental scientists, and to foster ideas for funding.

P-002. Longitudinal Modeling Done Right: Best Practice and Social Justice
Room 410
Wednesday, 1:00 pm – 5:00 pm (Ticketed event)

Todd Little will present a stimulating and thought provoking workshop on various topics that are critical to conducting meaningful longitudinal research. He will review issues related to design, measurement and analysis that impact the validity of any inferences and policy recommendations. The social justice implications of poorly conducted longitudinal studies is highlighted. Numerous recommendations and resources are provided. Little is an award-winning instructor and educator who has the ability to convey the complexities of modern statistical methods in an engaging, accessible, and enjoyable manner. Little is also the author of the acclaimed book “Longitudinal Structural Equation Modeling.”

P-003. Moral Development
Room 414
Wednesday, 1:00 pm – 6:00 pm (Ticketed event)

This half-day pre-conference will consist of three speakers who are leaders in the field of moral development, as well as a number of interactive breakout sessions and a poster session. Diverse aspects of moral development will be discussed and interactive sessions will allow for discussion regarding application of moral development research, the state of the field, and important future directions.

P-004. Beyond the Ivory Tower: Research Translation for Academics
Room 615A
Wednesday, 1:00 pm – 5:00 pm (Ticketed event)

The translation of research evidence to policy and practice is a topic of increasing interest and should be an integral part of an academic career. However, how to accomplish successful translation is a topic not often discussed within the ivory tower. This interactive pre-conference will focus on increasing knowledge about the translation process and will also specifically work on building skills related to 1) using evidence to inform policy and 2) working with the media. This workshop will be four hours, with the first hour dedicated to a keynote address from Ashley Merryman (co-author of the New York Times bestseller NurtureShock: New Thinking About Children and the forthcoming Top Dog: The Science of Winning and Losing). In hours two and three, participants will choose to attend two of three hands-on, small group breakout sessions. In hour four, the break-out session leaders and keynote speaker will participate in an interactive Q & A panel with the group. Light refreshments will be provided.

1-002. Being Undocumented in America: A Social Justice Perspective on Developmental Research, Policy and Practice
Chair: Virginia Huynh
Speaker: Hirokazu Yoshikawa

Abstract: Undocumented status in the US continues to be a source of policy disagreement and debate. This presentation presents a synthesis of evidence on the impacts of undocumented status (both own and of parents) on youth development. Then examples of policy application of this evidence will be presented from city, state and federal policy and program, as well as social justice perspectives.

Biography: Hirokazu Yoshikawa is the Courtney Sale Ross University Professor of Globalization and Education at New York University, and the Co-Director of the Institute for Globalization and Education at NYU. He is a community and developmental psychologist who studies the effects of public policies and programs related to immigration, parental employment and education, and poverty on children’s development. He conducts research in the United States and in low- and middle-income countries. His recent books include Immigrants Raising Citizens: Undocumented Parents and Their Young Children (2011, Russell Sage, sole authored). In 2011 he was nominated by President Obama and confirmed by the Senate as a member of the National Board for Education Sciences. He is currently co-chair of the education group of the U.N. Sustainable Development Solutions Network, the research and technical group advising the Secretary General on the post-2015 global development goals. He is also working with the New York Immigration Coalition and the city on aspects of a recently passed NYC policy to provide adult education funding for individuals potentially eligible for DACA who have not applied.

1-008. Neighborhoods, Schools and Academic Outcomes of Ethnic Minority Adolescents

Moderator: Guadalupe Espinoza
Invited Speakers: Patrick Sharkey, Sandra Graham

Abstract: This session will consider how aspects of residential environments and school environments come together to affect the academic experiences and the academic outcomes of racial and ethnic minority adolescents. Sharkey will describe research demonstrating how neighborhood disadvantage experienced over generations of family members influences the academic trajectories of African American adolescents, before focusing on the specific role of violence as a mechanism linking neighborhood disadvantage to school performance. Graham will present evidence on how school racial/ethnic diversity affects the social and academic outcomes of ethnic minority adolescents in middle school and across the transition to high school, focusing on specific mechanisms such as the formation of cross-ethnic friendships and reduced feelings of vulnerability, that help explain the positive effects of greater school diversity. Each presenter will then consider how research on the neighborhood and school settings can be linked together in a more refined way, in addition to considering issues surrounding measurement, theory, and methods for studying the effects of each setting on students' outcomes.

Speaker 1 Patrick Sharkey:
How Neighborhood Disadvantage Makes Its Way into the Schools

Abstract: This presentation will begin by describing research conducted for my recent book, which documents how racial inequality in neighborhood disadvantage is altered when one takes a multigenerational perspective. I will describe research demonstrating how cumulative exposure to disadvantaged neighborhoods, experienced over multiple generations, affects the academic trajectories of African American adolescents. In the second part of the presentation I will focus on the specific role of violence as a mechanism linking neighborhood disadvantage to school performance. This research demonstrates how specific incidents of violence impair children’s functioning and self-regulation as they enter the classroom setting, providing a tangible demonstration of one way in which students carry the burden of neighborhood disadvantage with them into the school setting.

Biography: Patrick Sharkey is Associate Professor of Sociology at New York University, with an affiliation at NYU’s Robert F. Wagner Graduate School of Public Service. Sharkey’s research focuses on stratification and mobility, with a specialized interest in the role that... neighborhoods and cities play in generating and maintaining inequality across multiple dimensions. His first book was published with the University of Chicago Press in 2013, and is titled Stuck in Place: Urban Neighborhoods and the End of Progress toward Racial Equality. Sharkey’s current research focuses on the specific role of violence as a mechanism linking neighborhood inequality with children’s developmental and academic trajectories. In addition to conducting research designed to identify the effects of exposure to community violence on children’s cognitive functioning, self-regulation, and academic performance, Sharkey is now developing and evaluating several interventions designed to reduce community violence and the consequences of exposure to violence.

Speaker 2 Sandra Graham:

How (Not If) School Diversity Matters for Ethnic Minority Adolescents

Abstract: In this presentation I discuss recent research on the effects of school racial/ethnic diversity on the social and academic outcomes of ethnic minority adolescents in middle school and across the transition to high school. Drawing on data from two large longitudinal studies in California, I test specific hypotheses about the social processes, such as formation of cross-ethnic friendships and reduced feelings of vulnerability, that help explain the positive effects of greater school diversity. I focus on different ways to measure school diversity as a structural, individual, and dynamic variable that can change across time and place. I also examine the intersection of academic and social outcomes of youth to make the argument that greater school diversity can help buffer many of the normative challenges of early adolescence for all youth. For both research and policy, the question should no longer be if school diversity matters, but how it matters.

Biography: Sandra Graham is a Professor in the Department of Education at UCLA and the University of California Presidential Chair in Education and Diversity. She received her BA from Barnard College, MA in History from Columbia University, and PhD in Education from UCLA. Her major research interests include the study of academic motivation and social development in children of color, with a special emphasis on development in school contexts that vary in racial/ethnic diversity. Professor Graham publishes in developmental, social, and educational psychology journals. Among her recent awards, she is a 2011 recipient of the Distinguished Scientific Contributions to Child Development Award from the Society for Research on Child Development (SRCD) and the 2014 E.L. Thorndike Award for Distinguished Contributions to Educational Psychology from Division 15 (Educational Psychology) of the American Psychological Association. Among her professional activities, Professor Graham is as associate editor of American Psychologist and Journal of Research on Adolescence.

Invited Speaker: Philip “Uri” Treisman

Abstract: The President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology estimates that to maintain our economic competitiveness our country will need to produce, over the next decade, one million more college graduates in mathematics-intensive fields of study. Doing so will require that we dramatically broaden the diversity of students who excel at and have a passion for math. I will describe the state of play in this endeavor with a special focus on the roles that the developmental sciences can play in improving STEM educational practice.

Biography: Philip “Uri” Treisman is professor of mathematics and of public affairs at The University of Texas at Austin, where he is the founder and director of the University’s Charles A. Dana Center. He is a senior advisor to the Aspen Institute’s Urban Superintendents’ Network and serves on the boards of the New Teacher Project, Education Resource Strategies and the Center for Community College Student Engagement. He recently served on the STEM working group of the President’s Council of Advisors on Science and Technology and on the Carnegie Corporation--Institute for Advanced Study Commission on Mathematics and Science Education. He served on the AACC 21st-Century Commission on the Future of Community Colleges and serves on the AACC Implementation Team. Uri was named a MacArthur Fellow in 1992 for his work on nurturing minority student high achievement in college mathematics and 2006 Scientist of the Year by the Harvard Foundation of Harvard University for his outstanding contributions to mathematics.

(Event 1-042) Invited Roundtable
Salon G, Floor 6
Thursday, 2:00 pm - 3:30 pm

1-042. Adolescents and Political Change: Where and When Can Youth Effect Change?

Invited Moderator: James Youniss
Invited Panelists: Barbara Ibrahim, Benjamin R. Kirshner, Roderick J. Watts

Abstract: Change in political systems often depends on the participation of teenagers and youth. One goal of the panel discussion is to describe the contributions of youth to political transformation, focusing particularly on recent social and political events in Arab Spring. The second goal of the panel is to examine the psychological, social, demographic, and political contexts of widespread youth participation and political change. Factors that lead to effective mobilization of youth are explored by panel members through a comparison of youth participation in Arab Spring with youth movements in other countries.

Biography: James Youniss is Research Professor of Psychology at the Catholic University of America in Washington, DC. For the past two decades he has studied young people's civic and political engagement. He has tried to advance the perspective that civic-political behavior is central to well-functioning insofar as people are citizens who live in communities with others. His current work, with Brian Barber, is focused on the interplay between political engagement and identity growth in young Egyptians who have actively participated in their country's civic strife since the revolution of January, 2011. This study is a contemporary case that allows us to observe the process through which young people seeking to make history, simultaneously develop commitment to a more just society and to purposeful identities.

Biography: Benjamin R. Kirshner is a Professor of Psychology at the Silberman school of Social Work at Hunter College and a Professor of Psychology at the Graduate Center, City University of New York. As both a Community psychologist and a licensed clinical psychologist his research and applied work looks at human behavior and social change from multiple levels of analysis. Watts is a fellow in the American Psychological Association and Society for Community Research and Action. In past years, Watts held positions at Georgia State University, DePaul University, The Consultation Center and the School of Medicine at Yale University, and Howard University. As a practitioner, he has served as a program development and evaluation consultant to governmental organizations, schools, foundations, research and public-policy organizations, universities, and other nonprofit organizations on a variety of projects. His action and research interests include liberation psychology, youth sociopolitical development theory and activism, men's development, social identity, and action research methodology. Current work includes a four-year, international study of youth community organizing and civic engagement.

1-060. Reframing Youth Development: An Empirical Approach to Communications

Invited Leader: Nathaniel Kendall-Taylor

Abstract: Dr. Kendall-Taylor will present an empirical approach to communications research and science translation that draws on methods from political science, sociology, anthropology and linguistics. He will apply this approach to present several of the most pressing conceptual problems associated with communicating about youth issues and translating the science of youth development. After laying out these challenges, Dr. Kendall-Taylor will present results from over 10 years of FrameWorks Institute research that has designed and tested strategies to use in addressing these communications challenges and reframing public understanding of youth and youth issues.

Biography: Nat Kendall-Taylor is the Director of Research at the FrameWorks Institute. He employs social science theory and research methods from anthropology to improve the ability of public policy to positively influence health and social issues. This involves studying how cognitive theory can be applied in understanding how people interpret information and make meaning of their social worlds. His past research has focused on child and family health and in understanding the social and cultural factors that create health disparities and affect decision-making. As a medical anthropologist, Nat has conducted fieldwork on the coast of Kenya studying pediatric epilepsy and the impacts of chronic illness on family well-being. He has also applied social science methods in research in Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan and has conducted ethnographic research on motivation in "extreme" athletes around the world. Nat has a B.A. from Emory University and master's and doctoral degrees from the University of California, Los Angeles.

2-002. The Influence of Adolescent Brain Science on the U.S. Supreme Court

Chair: Jessie Rudi
Keynote Speaker: Laurence Steinberg

Abstract: In the past decade, the United States Supreme Court has issued landmark opinions in three cases that involved the criminal culpability of juveniles. In 2005, the Court abolished the juvenile death penalty. In 2010, the Court banned life without parole for juveniles convicted of crimes other than homicide. And in 2012, the Court prohibited states from mandating life without parole for any crimes committed by minors. In all three cases, the Court drew on scientific studies of the adolescent brain in concluding that adolescents, by virtue of their inherent psychological and neurobiological immaturity, are not as responsible for their behavior as adults. This presentation will discuss the Court’s rationale in these cases and the role that scientific evidence about adolescent brain development played in its decisions.

Biography: Laurence Steinberg, is the Distinguished University Professor of Psychology at Temple University. He is the author of more than 350 articles on development during adolescence and the author or editor of 14 books, including the textbook, Adolescence, now in its 10th edition, and You and Your Adolescent: The Essential Guide for Ages 10 to 25. His research has focused on adolescent brain development, risk-taking and decision-making, family and peer relationships, school achievement, and juvenile justice. He is a former president of SRA and the Division of Developmental Psychology of APA, and chaired the National Academies’ Committee on the Science of Adolescence. Dr. Steinberg was the first laureate of the Klaus J. Jacobs Research Prize for Productive Youth Development. He was the lead scientific consultant for the APA on its briefs submitted to the Supreme Court in landmark cases that abolished the juvenile death penalty and limited the use of life without parole for juveniles. His new book, Age of Opportunity: Revelations From the New Science of Adolescence, will be published this fall.

2-025. The Transition to Adulthood for Youth in Foster Care: Implications for Developmentally Appropriate Policy and Practice
Chair: Jordan Bechtold
Invited Speaker: Mark E. Courtney

Abstract: The transition to adulthood can be challenging for young people generally, but it is understandably more challenging for those who have been placed in state care due to abuse or neglect by their caregivers. In recognition of this, US policy has evolved since the 1980s to provide increasingly generous support to foster youth making the transition to adulthood from state care. This presentation will synthesize findings from a program of research conducted over the past 20 years on the transition to adulthood for these young people, including the Midwest Evaluation of the Adult Functioning of Former Foster Youth and the Multi-Site Evaluation of Foster Youth Programs. It will summarize what is known about outcomes for former foster youth during the transition, risk and protective factors associated with their outcomes, unique subgroups of youth in need of distinct forms of assistance, and the evidence base for programmatic and policy intervention.

Biography: Mark E. Courtney is a Professor in the School of Social Service Administration at the University of Chicago. His fields of special interest are child welfare policy and services, the connection between child welfare services and other institutions serving families living in poverty, and the transition to adulthood for vulnerable populations. He is a faculty affiliate of Chapin Hall at the University of Chicago, which he served as Director from 2001 to 2006. Dr. Courtney is an elected Fellow of the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare. He received the 2010 Peter W. Forsythe Award for leadership in public child welfare from the National Association of Public Child Welfare Administrators. Before moving into academia, Dr. Courtney worked for several years providing group home care to abused and neglected adolescents. He regularly serves as a consultant to government, the voluntary sector, and the philanthropic community.

2-043. Introducing the International Consortium of Developmental Science Societies
Invited Moderator: Niobe Way

Abstract: This panel discussion is designed to introduce the new International Consortium of Developmental Science Societies (ICDSS) to the members of SRA, and to seek input from SRA members. SRA is one of the founding member societies. The panelists will introduce the mission and visions of the ICDSS, including its potential for strengthening international perspectives on developmental sciences, and potential for life span perspectives that enhance otherwise life-stage focused expertise. The panelists, who serve as Presidents of member societies, will introduce the three key mission areas of the ICDSS: generating knowledge; improving education and training; and communicating research findings. They will also discuss examples of potential ICDSS activities or initiatives. The goal of the session is to elicit SRA member input on the potential activities of the ICDSS.

Biography: Niobe Way, Past-President, SRA. Professor of Applied Psychology in the Department of Applied Psychology at New York University. She is also the co-Director of the Center for Research on Culture, Development, and Education at NYU. She received her doctorate from Harvard University in Human Development and Psychology and was an NIMH postdoctoral fellow in the psychology department at Yale University. Way's research focuses on the intersections of culture, context, and human development, with a particular focus on the social and emotional development of adolescents. She is interested in how schools, families, and peers as well as larger political and economic contexts influence developmental trajectories. Her work also focuses on social identities, including gender and... racial/ethnic identities, and the effects of gender and racial/ethnic stereotypes on adjustment and on friendships.

Biography: Stephen T. Russell, SRA President. Interim Director of the Norton School of Family and Consumer Sciences at the University of Arizona. He is also Distinguished Professor and Fitch Nesbitt Endowed Chair in Family and Consumer Sciences, and Director of the Frances McClelland Institute for Children, Youth, and Families. Stephen conducts research on cultural influences on parent-adolescent relationships, and the health and development of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) youth. He received a Wayne F. Placek Award from the American Psychological Foundation (2000), a William T. Grant Foundation Scholar (2001-2006), a Distinguished Investigator of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (2009-2011), and was elected as a member of the International Academy of Sex Research in 2004.

Biography: Ann S. Masten, Past-President of the Society for Research in Child Development. She is the Irving B. Harris Professor of Child Development and Distinguished McKnight University Professor in the Institute of Child Development, University of Minnesota. She grew up in a military family, attended Smith College, and completed her PhD in clinical psychology at the University of Minnesota, with an internship at UCLA. She joined the faculty of the Institute in 1986, serving as Director from 1999-2005. Her research focuses on understanding processes that promote competence and prevent problems in human development. She directs the Project Competence studies of risk and resilience, including research with normative populations and high-risk young people exposed to war, natural disasters, poverty, homelessness, and migration. She currently serves on the Board of Children, Youth and Families, Institute of Medicine/National Academies and the U.S. National Committee for the International Union for Psychological Science.

Biography: Wim Meeus, President of the European Association for Research on Adolescence. He is professor of Adolescent Development at Utrecht University and professor of Developmental Psychology at Tilburg University. He served as chair of the Institute for the Study of Education and Human Development, the Dutch National Research School for the Educational Sciences and Developmental Psychology, and for more than twenty years as chair or council member in various programs and the Social Sciences Division Board of the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research. At present he chairs the Youth and Family program of the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research, and is President of the European Association for Research on Adolescence (EARA). He has published over 350 scholarly journal papers or (contributions to) books. His scientific work includes theoretical psychological papers, experimental research into obedience to authority, and numerous longitudinal studies on various aspects of adolescent development. Currently he is the Principal Investigator of three ongoing longitudinal studies on adolescent development.

Biography: Frosso Motti, Professor of Psychology, University of Athens. She is President of the European Association of Developmental Psychology (EADP). She was formerly President of the European Association of Personality Psychology (EAPP). She received her doctorate from the Institute of Child Development, University of Minnesota. In 2005 she received the Distinguished International Alumni Award from the College of Education and Human Development of the University of Minnesota. She studies group and individual differences in immigrant youth adaptation from a risk and resilience perspective. Initially, she conducted a three-wave longitudinal study of over 1000 middle school immigrant adolescents and their nonimmigrant classmates. Acculturation was examined in developmental context, integrating social psychological concepts. Currently, she studies longitudinally another cohort of over 1000 immigrant and nonimmigrant youth who attend middle school during the economic crisis. The comparison of the pre-crisis and the crisis cohorts allows the examination of the effect of the economic downturn on immigrant and nonimmigrant youth’s adaptation, and the identification of those personal and social assets that may promote their positive adaptation. These studies are part of the Athena Studies of Resilient Adaptation (ASTRA) project.

Biography: Anne Petersen, Past President, International Society for the Study of Behavioral Development. Dr. Petersen is the founder and President of the Global Philanthropy Alliance, a public foundation that makes grants to support young social entrepreneurs in Africa. She was the Senior Vice President for Programs and Corporate Officer at the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Michigan. Previously, Dr. Petersen was the Deputy Director and Chief Operating Officer of the National Science Foundation (NSF); before NSF, she was the first Vice-President for Research, as well as Dean of the Graduate School and Professor of Adolescent Development, and of Pediatrics, at the University of Minnesota. She went to Minnesota from Penn State University, where she was the founding Dean of the College of Health of Human Development, and before that she was Professor and head of the Department of Human Development and Family Studies.

2-061. Adolescent Development: Processes and Principles
Chair: Stephen T. Russell
Invited Speaker: Wim Meeus

Abstract: Drawing from a series of longitudinal studies I will address various domains of adolescent development: identity and personality, social cognition in particular empathy, personal relationships (parents, friends and intimate partners), and internalizing and externalizing problems. I will present variable and person centered analyses of developmental trajectories within developmental domains, and various cross-links on adolescent development across domains. I will delineate a number of principles of adolescent development from these findings. The presentation will cover development from early to late adolescence and from late adolescence till emerging adulthood.

Biography: Wim Meeus is professor of Adolescent Development at Utrecht University and professor of Developmental Psychology at Tilburg University. He served as chair of the Institute for the Study of Education and Human Development, the Dutch National Research School for the Educational Sciences and Developmental Psychology, and for more than twenty years as chair or council member in various programs and the Social Sciences Division Board of the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research. At present he chairs the Youth and Family program of the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research, and is President of the European Association for Research on Adolescence (EARA). He has published over 350 scholarly journal papers or (contributions to) books. His scientific work includes theoretical psychological papers, experimental research into obedience to authority, and numerous longitudinal studies on various aspects of adolescent development. Currently he is the Principal Investigator of three ongoing longitudinal studies on adolescent development.

This session will begin with a welcome message from the incoming President of SAHM, Carol Ford. Then Evelyn Kappeler, Director of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Office of Adolescent Health, will introduce the new National Adolescent Health Agenda. Following her presentation, Stephen Russell will give the 2014 SRA Presidential Address.

2-078. Social Justice, Research, and Adolescence
Chair: Niobe Way, SRA Past-President
Speaker: Stephen T. Russell, SRA President

Abstract: In what ways might research on adolescence contribute to social justice for adolescents? In this address I consider several areas that, for me, deserve more attention in our field and our scholarship. First, we rarely acknowledge our privilege and authority both to improve the material conditions of youth, but also to pathologize them. Second, even in discussions of applied or translational research, we do not value urgencies, or compelling needs of youth, in our assessments of the contributions or value of research. I draw from a broad range of theoretical perspectives – queer, border and rhetorical theories as well as theories of youth – to make the case for a framework from which our fields may consciously work toward social justice for and with young people.

Biography: Stephen T. Russell is Interim Director of the Norton School of Family and Consumer Sciences at the University of Arizona. He is also Distinguished Professor and Fitch Nesbitt Endowed Chair in Family and Consumer Sciences, and Director of the Frances McKeeland Institute for Children, Youth, and Families. Stephen conducts research on cultural influences on parent-adolescent relationships, and the health and development of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) youth. He received a Wayne F. Placek Award from the American Psychological Foundation (2000), was a William T. Grant Foundation Scholar (2001-2006), a Distinguished Investigator of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (2009-2011), a board member of the National Council on Family Relations (2005-2008), and was elected as a member of the International Academy of Sex Research in 2004. He is President of the Society for Research on Adolescence.

3-002. Enhancing Neighborhood Collective Efficacy: Children as Deliberative Citizens
Chair: Vanja Lazarevic
Keynote Speakers: Felton James (Tony) Earls and Mary (Maya) Carlson

Abstract: Earls begins by discussing the PHDCN-- a multilevel, longitudinal study of children from birth to age 25, which initially focused on criminal behavior. Discovery of the protective influences of collective efficacy represented a breakthrough in understanding contextual factors as determinants of physical and behavioral health. Simultaneously, Carlson's research on quality of early childhood programs and adolescents’ active community engagement provided new insights into factors that contribute to the generation and enhancement of collective efficacy. What emerged was a theoretical framework for conceptualizing children as deliberative citizens. The capability of adolescents in Chicago and Cambridge to reach mutual understanding about neighborhood and school issues became the basis for a cluster randomized controlled trial of the Young Citizens Program in Tanzania. The results demonstrate enhanced deliberative self-efficacy in young adolescents and greater neighborhood collective efficacy related to HIV/AIDS competence. The challenges of sustaining and scaling-up the program conclude the presentation.

Biography: Felton Earls is Research Professor of Human Behavior and Development at the Harvard School of Public Health and Professor Emeritus of Social Medicine at Harvard Medical School. A child psychiatrist and epidemiologist, he was Principal Investigator of The Project on Human Development in Chicago Neighborhoods (PHDCN). He has recently reported on a cluster randomized controlled trial designed to enable children to participate as health agents in strengthening community HIV competence in Tanzania.

Biography: Mary Carlson is Associate Professor of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School. Following three decades of laboratory research on the behavioral and neurobiological consequences of early experience in non-human primates, she shifted her research to social policy for children. With a new focus on capacities, rather than deficits, she and Felton Earls developed, implemented and evaluated the Young Citizens Program in the U.S., Costa Rica and Tanzania as part of their Child Health and Social Ecology (CHASE) program.

3-026. Youth in the Arab Uprisings: What the Research Missed
Chair: Silvia H. Koller
Invited Speaker: Barbara Ibrahim, 2014 SRA International Fellow

Abstract: The literature on Arab youth has typically stressed exclusion from social systems such as the workforce or politics and expressed concern for consequent vulnerability to apathy or extremist ideologies. Structural unemployment was most often associated with delayed marriage and an array of other 'private' behaviors. Missing almost entirely from the pre-2011 research was any analysis of the ways that contemporary youth were engaged in public space, whether through social media or face to face collective behavior. While the framework of exclusion was useful for analyzing how institutions were failing youth in the standard transitions to adulthood, it missed innovations in how young Arabs were acquiring knowledge and political aspirations and preparing to exercise new understandings of their own efficacy.

Biography: Barbara Lethem Ibrahim is founding director of the John D. Gerhart Center for Philanthropy and Civic Engagement, established in 2006 at the American University in Cairo. Previously she served as Regional Director for West Asia and North Africa of the Population Council, and as a program officer for Urban Poverty at the Ford Foundation. She is a global migrant, born and educated in the United States, studied in Beirut and moved to Egypt with her husband where she has lived and worked since 1975. Her M.A. in sociology is from the American University of Beirut and Ph.D. from Indiana University. Her book, Charity to Social Change: Trends in Arab Philanthropy, was published in English and Arabic in 2008/9. Other publications are on youth activism in Egypt, adolescent survey research in multiple countries, and the roles of higher education in civic transformations. In 1999 she was inducted into the International Educators' Hall of Fame and received the Lifetime Achievement Award of the Association of Middle East Women's Studies in 2003. She currently serves on the Board of Directors of Worldwide Initiatives for Grantmaker Support (WINGS) and the Ibn Khaldun Center in Cairo.

Abstract: The U.N. Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) is a remarkable document, which has already improved the lives of millions of children and families around the world. Ratified into law by nearly all countries of the world (except Somalia, South Sudan, and the United States) the CRC outlines children's political, social, civil, economic, and cultural rights, and in doing so recognizes young people as deserving of citizenship and inherent human rights. Not surprisingly, the CRC continues to be less well known as an instrument for promoting children's development and well being in the U.S. In addition, while the CRC addresses the rights of all children and adolescents under 18 years of age, the entitlements and protections described in the document are often viewed as more important for younger children than for their adolescent counterparts. This Invited Roundtable will consider the current state of research and scholarship with respect to the question, “Why should the CRC be considered as important for adolescents as it is for younger children?” We will discuss the importance of acknowledging the evolving capacities of the child with respect to engaging adolescents as active agents in matters and decisions concerning them. Our conversation will also focus on the CRC as a framework for practice, policy, and research on adolescent development. Finally, the implications of U.S. failure to ratify the CRC will be considered.

Biography: Felton Earls is Research Professor of Human Behavior and Development at the Harvard School of Public Health and Professor Emeritus of Social Medicine at Harvard Medical School. He is a graduate of the College of Medicine at Howard University. From 1990 to 2005 he was Principal Investigator of The Project on Human Development in Chicago Neighborhoods, a multi-level, longitudinal study on the causes and consequences of children's exposure to urban violence. Its seminal contribution demonstrates the independent effects of collective efficacy on the control of violence and the promotion of physical health and emotional well-being for children and adolescents. Building on results of the Chicago study, he and his colleagues have recently reported findings of a cluster randomized controlled trial designed to strengthen community capacity to promote health in the context of the AIDS epidemic in Tanzania.

Biography: Judith Diers is Chief, Adolescent Development and Participation Section, UNICEF. Prior to taking up this position in July 2011, Judy spent twelve years as a researcher at the Population Council, culminating as an Associate in the Poverty, Gender and Youth program, where she coordinated a global portfolio of research on Transitions to Adulthood with a particular focus on adolescent girls. As a member of the Population Council Institutional Review Board (IRB), Judy drew upon her expertise in research ethics to ensure a focus on research methodologies and protocols that protect the rights of adolescents, including their right to be heard. She has worked extensively throughout Africa and Asia, beginning with four years in Namibia following that country's independence, where she provided strategic direction in the building of the country's first university, helped to found the country's WorldTeach volunteer program and advised the Namibia Red Cross on the gender aspects of its water scheme. She holds a master's degree from Union Theological Seminary in theology and ethics and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Princeton University in public policy and demography.

Biography: Daniel P. Keating is Professor of Psychology, Psychiatry, and Pediatrics; and Research Professor at the Survey Research Center, Institute for Social Research, all at the University of Michigan. The major focus of his work is on the integration of scientific knowledge about basic developmental and biodevelopmental processes, population pathways to developmental health, and the social factors that affect individual and population development. Dr. Keating received his Ph.D. in psychology from Johns Hopkins University, and has held appointments at the University of Minnesota, the University of Maryland, the University of Toronto, and the Max Planck Institute for Human Development and Education in Berlin. He has edited and written 9 books (most recently, Nature and Nurture in Early Child Development, Cambridge University Press, 2011) and contributed over 200 papers to scientific journals, scholarly collections, and scientific conferences.

Biography: Marcela Raffaeelli is a Professor in the Department of Human and Community Development at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Throughout her career, she has focused on questions of developmental risk and resilience in diverse populations of adolescents. Most recently, she has conducted collaborative studies in the U.S., Brazil, and Mexico to examine risk and protective factors that operate in... different cultural contexts. She served as lead guest editor for a special issue of the Journal of Research on Adolescence focused on "Adolescents in the Majority World" (published in 2013) and was invited to contribute a chapter on adolescent risk and resilience across cultures for the forthcoming Oxford Handbook of Human Development and Culture. In addition to conducting research on developmental risk and resilience across cultural contexts, Dr. Raffaelli teaches courses with an international focus (e.g., Families in Global Perspective) and regularly leads an undergraduate study tour to Brazil (Family Strengths and Challenges in Brazil).

Biography: Elizabeth M. Saewyc is Professor of Nursing and Adolescent Medicine at the University of British Columbia. Dr. Saewyc heads the interdisciplinary Stigma and Resilience Among Vulnerable Youth Center, and is a co-investigator of the Health Behaviour of School Age Children’s Canadian team. She is a Fellow in both the Society for Adolescent Health and Medicine and the Canadian Academy of Health Sciences. Dr. Saewyc's research and clinical practice primarily focus on how stigma, violence, and trauma influence teens' health, coping and risk behaviors, and what protective factors in relationships can buffer this trauma. She has worked for 20 years with diverse populations of young people, including runaway and street-involved youth, sexually abused/sexually exploited teens, gay/lesbian/bisexual/transgender adolescents, youth in custody, immigrant and refugee adolescents, and indigenous youth in several countries. The majority of her research has been funded by the National Institute of Health and Canadian Institutes of Health Research.

3-060. Moving into Mid-Career

Invited Moderator: Eva S. Lefkowitz
Invited Panelists: Antonius (Toon) Cillessen, Nancy Darling, Jacquelynne Eccles, Ann Hagell, Vivian Tseng

Abstract: As new junior faculty or applied scientists, many of us received lots of good mentoring and excellent advice about how to succeed. But as we move into mid-career, there are many more options, a lot more demands, and suddenly much LESS guidance. Which direction do you want to take? Research? Master teacher? Administration? Editorial? Expand your research into applied settings? Leave academics and move into consulting or applied work? Committee work, teaching and mentoring demands, reviews . . . Different opportunities pull us many different ways. This roundtable discussion talks about making choices, finding opportunities, and building a life for yourself at mid-career. And once you decide where to go, how do get there? How do you take on leadership roles in journals, at your institution, or in organizations like SRA? What kind of professional life do you want to build for yourself if your institution's mission is NOT primarily research? How do you find a new career path if you've gotten tenure and have decided academia isn't where you want to be? Or if tenure just didn't work out for you? How about moving from policy or applied work into academic? How do you move into academia if you've established your career outside of academia? Once your research program is established, how do you move into dissemination, outreach, prevention research, and/or public policy? Join us and begin a conversation.
